

Contributors

David B. Burrell, CSC, is Professor of Comparative Theology, Tangaza College, Nairobi, and Hesburgh Professor Emeritus, University of Notre Dame. He has worked widely on comparative issues in philosophical theology in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. Recent publications include Faith and Freedom: An Interfaith Perspective (2005), Deconstructing Theodicy (2008), When Faith and Reason Meet (2009), and Learning to Trust in Freedom: Signs from Jewish, Christian, and Muslim Traditions (2010).

Sylvana Chrysakopoulou is a researcher at the Hellenic Parliament Foundation in Athens, Greece, and has taught ancient Greek philosophy at the Universities of Patras and Crete. Her main research interests focus on the pre-Socratics; Plato and the pre-Platonic thinkers; Aristotle and the pre-Socratics; ancient Greek philosophy and poetry; and ancient Greek philosophy and religion. Her publications include an English translation of Plato's Parmenides (2010), and her La naissance de la théologie dans la poésie présocratique will be published in 2012 by Peeters (Leuven).

Claude-Olivier Doron is currently a doctoral student at the University Paris-Denis Diderot (Paris VII). His research interests and recent publications range over the history of the natural sciences and psychiatry in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, contemporary criminology and psychiatry, and the philosophy of Michel Foucault.

Robert Fuller is Professor of Religious Studies at Bradley University. Specializing in the psychological study of religion and American religious history, his two most recent books are Wonder: From Emotion to Spirituality (2006) and Spirituality in the Flesh: Bodily Sources of Religious Experience (2008).

Michel Hulín is Professor Emeritus of Indian and Comparative Philosophy at the University Paris-Sorbonne (Paris IV). His works deal with classical Indian philosophy and with the epistemological and metaphysical problems raised by the confrontation of the European and Asian intellectual traditions. Recent publications include: La mystique sauvage (1993), Qu'est-ce que l'ignorance métaphysique (dans la pensée hindoue) (1994), Classical Indian Philosophy Reinterpreted (with V. Lysenko; 2007), Comment la philosophie indienne s'est-elle développée (2008), and La Bhagavad-Gîtâ, avec des extraits du Commentaire de Shankara (2010).

Contributors

Derek Matravers teaches philosophy at the Open University. He is also an Affiliated Lecturer at Cambridge, where he is a Fellow of Emmanuel College. In addition to Art and Emotion (2008), he is the author of many articles in aesthetics, ethics, and political philosophy. He is currently working on an introduction to the Philosophy of Art to be published by Acumen, and a monograph titled Fiction and Narrative, to be published by Oxford University Press.

Stephen Mulhall is Professor of Philosophy and Fellow of New College, Oxford. His research interests include Heidegger, Wittgenstein, Sartre, and Nietzsche, as well as the relationship between philosophy and the arts. His most recent publication is The Wounded Animal: J. M. Coetzee and the Difficulty of Reality in Literature and Philosophy (2009).

Mary-Jane Rubenstein is Associate Professor of Religion at Wesleyan University, where she teaches primarily in the intersections of continental philosophy and philosophy of religion. She is the author of Strange Wonder: The Closure of Metaphysics and the Opening of Awe (2009) and of numerous articles and chapters on negative theology, relational ontologies, and the postcolonial Anglican Communion. She is currently writing a new book about “multiverse” cosmologies.

Alexander Rueger is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Alberta. He has published widely in the philosophy and history of science and, more recently, on the history of aesthetics, especially on Kant. He is now working on a book on the Critique of Judgment.

Sophia Vasalou is Junior Research Fellow at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. Her first book, on classical Islamic theology, is Moral Agents and Their Deserts: The Character of Mu'tazilite Ethics (2008), and she is currently preparing a study of Ibn Taymiyya's ethics. Her research interests in philosophy include Wittgenstein and Schopenhauer, and she is currently at work on a longer study of wonder and a monograph on Schopenhauer titled Schopenhauer and the Aesthetic Practice of Philosophy, to be published by Cambridge University Press.