Foreword	3
Introduction	13
A Note on Terminology	15

Part One: Problems of Principle

Chapter 1. Christian worship considered as the recapitulation of the history of salvation
1. The Christological basis of church worship	21
(a) The life of Jesus “liturgical”
(b) The temporal dimensions of the worship offered by Christ: The Lamb predestined before the creation of the world; The heavenly worship; The worship of the parousia
(c) The twofold Christological basis of the Church’s worship
2. The presence of Christ in Christian worship and the epiklesis	26
(a) The presence of Christ in worship
(b) The problem of the epiklesis
3. The cult as recapitulation of the history of salvation	32
(a) In the chronological sense: As an anamnesis of the past work of Christ; As prolepsis of the Kingdom to come; As a participation of heavenly worship; As an eschatological phenomenon; As a restoration of supralapsarian worship
(b) In the theological sense: the three offices of Christ
(c) The Church’s worship and the continuance of the history of salvation: Why does the history of salvation go on after all is accomplished? – In what way does it continue? – Christian worship as an agent in the historical process of salvation.

Chapter 2. The cult as the epiphany of the Church

1. The Church as a liturgical assembly 42
2. The implications of the cult considered as the epiphany of the Church 43
 - (a) The Church manifested as a baptismal community: The Church shown as distinct from the world; The world transfigured in worship; The world as an abiding danger to the Church
 - (b) The Church manifested as a nuptial community: The Bride of Christ answers “yes” to her Lord’s appeal – eagerly expects His coming – loves her Deliverer
 - (c) The Church manifested as a catholic community: Worship shows the Church poised beyond sociological barriers – Restores to men the fullness of their humanity – Gathers together the Church in spite of spatial separations – Reveals the “catholicity in time” of the Church – Welcomes the whole of Creation into the worshipping Church
 - (d) The Church manifested as a diaconal community: The Church exists for God and for the world – It is a body with diverse members
 - (e) The Church manifested as an apostolic community: Through its worship, it emerges from the world, in order to confront it – Note on the expression “Mass”, a word of dismissal for those sent forth
 - (f) Three observations: The “liturgical” marks of the Church in the sixteenth-century confessions of faith; It is primarily in its cult, rather than in catechesis, structure or diaconate, that the Church appears for what it is; When the Church needs reformation, it is the cult that must be reformed
3. The cult as the heart of the local Christian community 54
 - (a) The cult as the criterion of parochial life
 - (b) Diastole and systole

Chapter 3. The cult, the end and future of the world

1. Two preliminary remarks: 57
 - (a) Sacred and profane: To fail to state the difference is to take one's stand in a theologia gloriae; The distinction is disliked, because it condemns multitudinism; The minority position of the Church will throw the distinction into relief once more
 - (b) The public nature of worship
2. The cult considered as a threat to the world 62
 - (a) The cult – a challenge to human righteousness
 - (b) The cult as a prelude to the Last Judgment: In relation to the world: the Church in the world parallels the Kingdom and the gathering together of the resurrected; In relation to the worshippers, who are still in the world
 - (c) The Christian cult as a protest against non-Christian cults
3. The cult as a promise for the world 68
 - (a) Vicarious character of the cult
 - (b) The cult as the expression of the mystery of Creation
 - (c) The Christian cult as the pardon and fulfilment of non-Christian cults: As pardon; As fulfilment; The attendant risks
4. Cult and evangelization 77
 - (a) The twofold orientation of the Church
 - (b) The Mass of the catechumens, the meeting-point of worship and evangelism
 - (c) The cult is an evangelizing force in itself

Chapter 4. The approach to forms

1. Necessity and limitations of liturgical forms 80
 - (a) Their necessity: Because of the “offensive” aspect of the Incarnation – Christmas; Because of the appeal of the Incarnation – the Ascension
 - (b) Their limitations: The second Commandment; Their inherent justification limited to necessitas praecepti

(c) Further necessary, because of the new Creation
(d) The theological importance of form
2. The domains of liturgical expression	86
(a) The “logical” domain
(b) The acoustic domain: The spoken word; The sung word; Silence in liturgy
(c) The visual domain
(d) The kinetic domain: Liturgical attitudes; Liturgical gestures; Liturgical movement from place to place
3. Discipline and liberty in liturgical expression	95
(a) The norms of liturgical expression: Fidelity to the Bible; Respect for liturgical tradition; Respect for the future; Respect for the Church’s hic et nunc , confessed in its cult
(b) The conditions of liturgical formulation: Intelligibility; Simplicity; Beauty
(c) The limits of liberty in liturgical forms
(d) The reformability of worship
4. The reward of liturgical expression	107
(a) Worship as a school of taste
(b) Worship as the source of vocation of the arts, and their justification
(c) Worship as the inspiration of political and social life
Chapter 5. The necessity of the cult
1. The Justification of the necessity of Christian worship	111
(a) Because it was instituted by Jesus Christ
(b) Because it is the work of the Holy Spirit
(c) Because it is one way in which the historical process of salvation is realized: Through it, the Church comes into being, and abides; And resists the designs of the Evil One
(d) Because the Kingdom is not yet established with power
2. The usefulness of the cult	117
(a) Pedagogic
(b) Sociological

- (c) Psychological
- (d) We must not despise the usefulness of the cult
- 3. Obedience to the call to worship, and in its celebration 122
 - (a) Liturgical obedience is demanded of us because of the necessity and usefulness of the cult, and because of the salvation wrought for us by Jesus Christ
 - (b) It concerns two points: obeying the summons to worship, and obeying the invitation to the Lord's Supper
 - (c) Three remarks: Our Churches must be freed from the rationalist heresy that worship is not really necessary; To do this, we must restore to worship its sacramental, communal and paschal fullness; Neglect of worship is not only disobedience but a proof of de-Christianization

Part Two: Problems of Celebration

Chapter 6. The components of the cult

- 1. List of the elements of the cult 129
 - (a) The Word of God: Its "anagnostic" proclamation; Its "clerical" proclamation; Its "prophetic" proclamation
 - (b) The Lord's Supper: A glance at its history; Its necessity – reasons against and for it; Relationship of the Word and the Eucharist; The Eucharist gives no more than does the Word; No understanding its necessity without taking into account the sacrificial aspect
 - (c) The prayers: The mystery of prayer; The forms of prayer; Other forms – the Lord's Prayer; the confession of faith; hymns
 - (d) The liturgical witness to Christian fellowship: The Offertory; Mutual exhortations; The notices
- 2. How to articulate the elements of worship in relation to one another 176
 - (a) Formal
 - (b) Eschatological

- (c) With reference to the way God works through the cult:
Objective and subjective elements: “Divine service” in two senses; Sacramental and sacrificial elements; These may be distinguished but never divorced; Distinction is useful to the reformability of worship, and the actualization of the cult for the epiphany of the Church in a particular country or century
- (d) Résumé

Chapter 7. The participants in the cult

- 1. God 184
- 2. The faithful 185
 - (a) The baptized: Their right and duty to celebrate worship; Both must be respected
 - (b) The elect of all times and places
 - (c) Peripheral participants: Who they are; Their part is to listen; Two remarks
- 3. The angels, partners in worship 205
 - (a) Who are the angels?
 - (b) The link between the angels and the Church’s worship: The Church’s worship=participation in the angels’ worship, and the presence of the angels in our worship; Have the angels a special ministry in our earthly worship?
 - (c) The ministry of the angels in general
- 4. The world and its sighs 209
 - (a) The world participates in the Church’s praises, not vice versa
 - (b) The world’s part in the Church’s worship

Chapter 8. The time of the cult

- 1. Sunday 213
 - (a) The Biblical data: Jesus and the Sabbath; The earliest texts; Jesus as the anapausis does not directly affect the day of worship
 - (b) The first day of the week

(c) The Lord's day
(d) The significance of Sunday: Necessity of Sunday worship; The sacramental ambivalence of Sunday; Historical note on Sunday
2. The liturgical year	227
(a) Historical note
(b) Legitimacy of its celebration: New Testament is opposed to the Jewish, not the Christian liturgical year; Conditions of its legitimacy; Its usefulness; Should the date of Easter be fixed?
3. The sanctification of time	237
(a) Definition
(b) Pars pro toto (One Eucharist only each week! – One celebration only in each parish!)
Chapter 9. The place of worship
1. The signs of Christ's presence	240
(a) Under the Old Covenant
(b) Jesus of Nazareth the Temple of God; Localization of the worshipping church; Local assemblies for worship are not in a synagogal relationship to a Roman "temple"
(c) The signs of Christ's presence: The four signs; Necessity of the epiklesis; Two remarks on the Eucharistic species; Respect for the means chosen by Christ to signify His presence
(d) The Heavenly temple
2. The place of worship as a witness to the presence of Christ	251
(a) Historical note on Christian places of worship
(b) Component parts of the place of worship: List; Arrangement; Symbolism; Legitimacy of images – the need for review
(c) Dedication and sacredness of places of worship
3. The sanctification of space	281

Chapter 10. The order of worship

1. Teachings which result from the history of worship:	283
(a) Without worship, no Church; Worship is a way of life, having a rhythm (Word – Sacraments); And capable of varied forms; Not immune from disorder; The Reformation and worship
(b) A “protestant” or a traditional order of worship?
2. The order of worship	288
(a) Some principles: An order is indispensable; It must be epikletic, without confessional prejudices; neither archaeological nor “modern”, but simple; No optimum is here put forward; probably none exists
(b) Some problems arising from the “Galilean” phase of the cult: Is a moment of humiliation needed? Are the Creed, the Lord’s Prayer and the Intercessions in place here? The problem of the notices
(c) Some problems arising from the “Jerusalemite” phase: The offertory; Some problems of celebrating the Eucharist
(d) The transition from the “Galilean” to the “Jerusalemite” phase: A caesura necessary; In our modern situation, this is equivocal as it “excommunicates” some of the faithful who could communicate if they wished; We must not render it meaningless; How may it be made?
(e) The ordinary and the proper: Definition and historical note; Justification of the distinction they represent; A place must be reserved (in the litany and the preface) for free spontaneous prayers
(f) The opening and the closing of the service
